CREATION NATION CREATIVITY AWARDS!

What is LEGO® Creation Nation? Launched in 2007, Creation Nation is a campaign to underscore the importance of creativity in adults and kids alike. It is a program to unearth, celebrate and cultivate lifelong creativity. Last year, some of the Creation Nation highlights included a kick-off building challenge in Washington D.C. where kids and parents contributed to building a 2 million-brick map of the United States; the launch of the Creativity Awards (see below); and creation of the destination website for learning about creativity at home, in school and in the workplace at www.LEGOCreationNation.com.

CREATION NATION

Be Rewarded For Being Creative!

As part of its Creation Nation campaign, in 2007 The LEGO Company launched the first annual Creativity Awards, designed to recognize creative kids by granting them $5,000 to fund any creative pursuit. Last year, the winners ranged from musicians to junior philanthropists to budding engineers.

The LEGO Company is pleased to announce that its Creativity Awards are back again in 2008. Kids ages 6-13 are invited to submit their creative stories for consideration. Simply print, complete and mail the entry form found in the Creativity Awards section of www.LEGOCreationNation.com or on the Club page of www.LEGO.com. Tell us how you are creative for a chance to win your own creativity fund, and then use it to record your own CD, make a mini movie, buy art supplies, write a book, or do anything your creative heart desires!

PARENTS: Entry rules, deadlines and more information can be found online at www.LEGOCreationNation.com!

THE CREATION NATION IN ACTION

Everyone is creative in their own way. Here are two live examples of creativity in action; these are true members of the LEGO Creation Nation.

Teen Cameron Kruse Invents a New Way to Mud a Baseball

All baseballs in the big leagues get rubbed in mud before game time, which de-glosses the balls and makes them easier for pitchers to grip. Though batboys have been mudding baseballs by hand since the 1950s, Colorado Springs Sky Sox batboy Cameron Kruse created a better way: a mudding robot. Made from LEGO products, Cameron's bot does the job in 30 seconds – a quarter of the time it takes to do it by hand. And the mud is spread more evenly, too. Cameron's machine has won engineering prizes and garnered attention from the major and minor leagues. Who knows what this creative sports-lover will do next!

Duff Goldman, Food Network Personality and Devoted LEGO Enthusiast

In addition to owning and operating Baltimore, Maryland-based Charm City Cakes, Food Network personality Duff Goldman is also a sculptor, artist, musician – and dedicated LEGO fan. In fact, it was Goldman's early years of building and rebuilding with LEGO bricks that helped inspire his creative career choice. That, coupled with a welding know-how, enabled him to turn cake-baking on its ear and make cakes that are beautiful, challenging, and as out-of-the-ordinary as possible! This Ace of Cake's advice to aspiring creative artists? "Nobody can change the world by following the rules!"

LANDS OF ADVENTURE!

MY ADVENTURES
HAVE TAKEN ME ALL OVER THE WORLD,
WHERE I'VE ENCOUNTERED PLENTY OF STRANGE
LOCATIONS AND AMAZING DISCOVERIES. HERE ARE
JUST A FEW OF THE INCREDIBLE AND MYSTERIOUS
PLACES THAT ARCHAEOLOGISTS HAVE STUDIED AROUND THE GLOBE!

PUEBLOS

These prehistoric cities were built into the walls of high cliffs in the southwestern United States. Their builders are sometimes called the Ancient Pueblo Peoples or Anasazi, but no one knows their real name or why they abandoned their dwellings.

TEOTIHUACAN

In the first half of the 1st millennium A.D., this was the largest pre-Columbian city in the Americas. Its original name is lost, but the Aztecs called it "Birthplace of the Gods." The Pyramid of the Sun on the Avenue of the Dead once had a temple and altar on top for an unknown god or goddess.

STONEHENGE

This mysterious circle of stones was built around 2200 B.C. in England. Many myths and legends surround it, from the tales of King Arthur to ancient Druidic rites. Some researchers think that it was an astronomical observatory used to chart the movements of the moon and stars.

MACHU PICCHU

Set on a mountaintop 8,000 feet high, Machu Picchu is called the Lost City of the Incas. Built around 1450 A.D., it was forgotten by the outside world and entombed by the Peruvian jungle for centuries. Its Temple of the Sun was dedicated to the sun god, and its Monumental Mausoleum was used for rites and sacrifices.

PYRAMIDS

The great pyramids of Egypt are some of the biggest structures ever built by human hands. Ancient stone tombs of pharaohs and kings, they often held treasures, but legends say that they also inflicted terrible curses on those who dared to rob them. Their builders may have believed that they sent the souls of the dead to the realm of the gods.

THE COLOSSEUM

The Colosseum of Rome is the largest amphitheater of the ancient Roman Empire. Built around 70-80 A.D., the ornate stone arena could hold 50,000 spectators. People came for over 500 years to watch its deadly gladiatorial battles and other public "entertainments."

POMPEII

This Roman city in Italy was destroyed by the erupting volcano Mt. Vesuvius in the year 79 A.D. Completely buried by ash and volcanic mud, it was lost for nearly 1700 years until its accidental rediscovery in 1748. The catastrophic burial preserved Pompeii right down to the Latin graffiti on the walls.

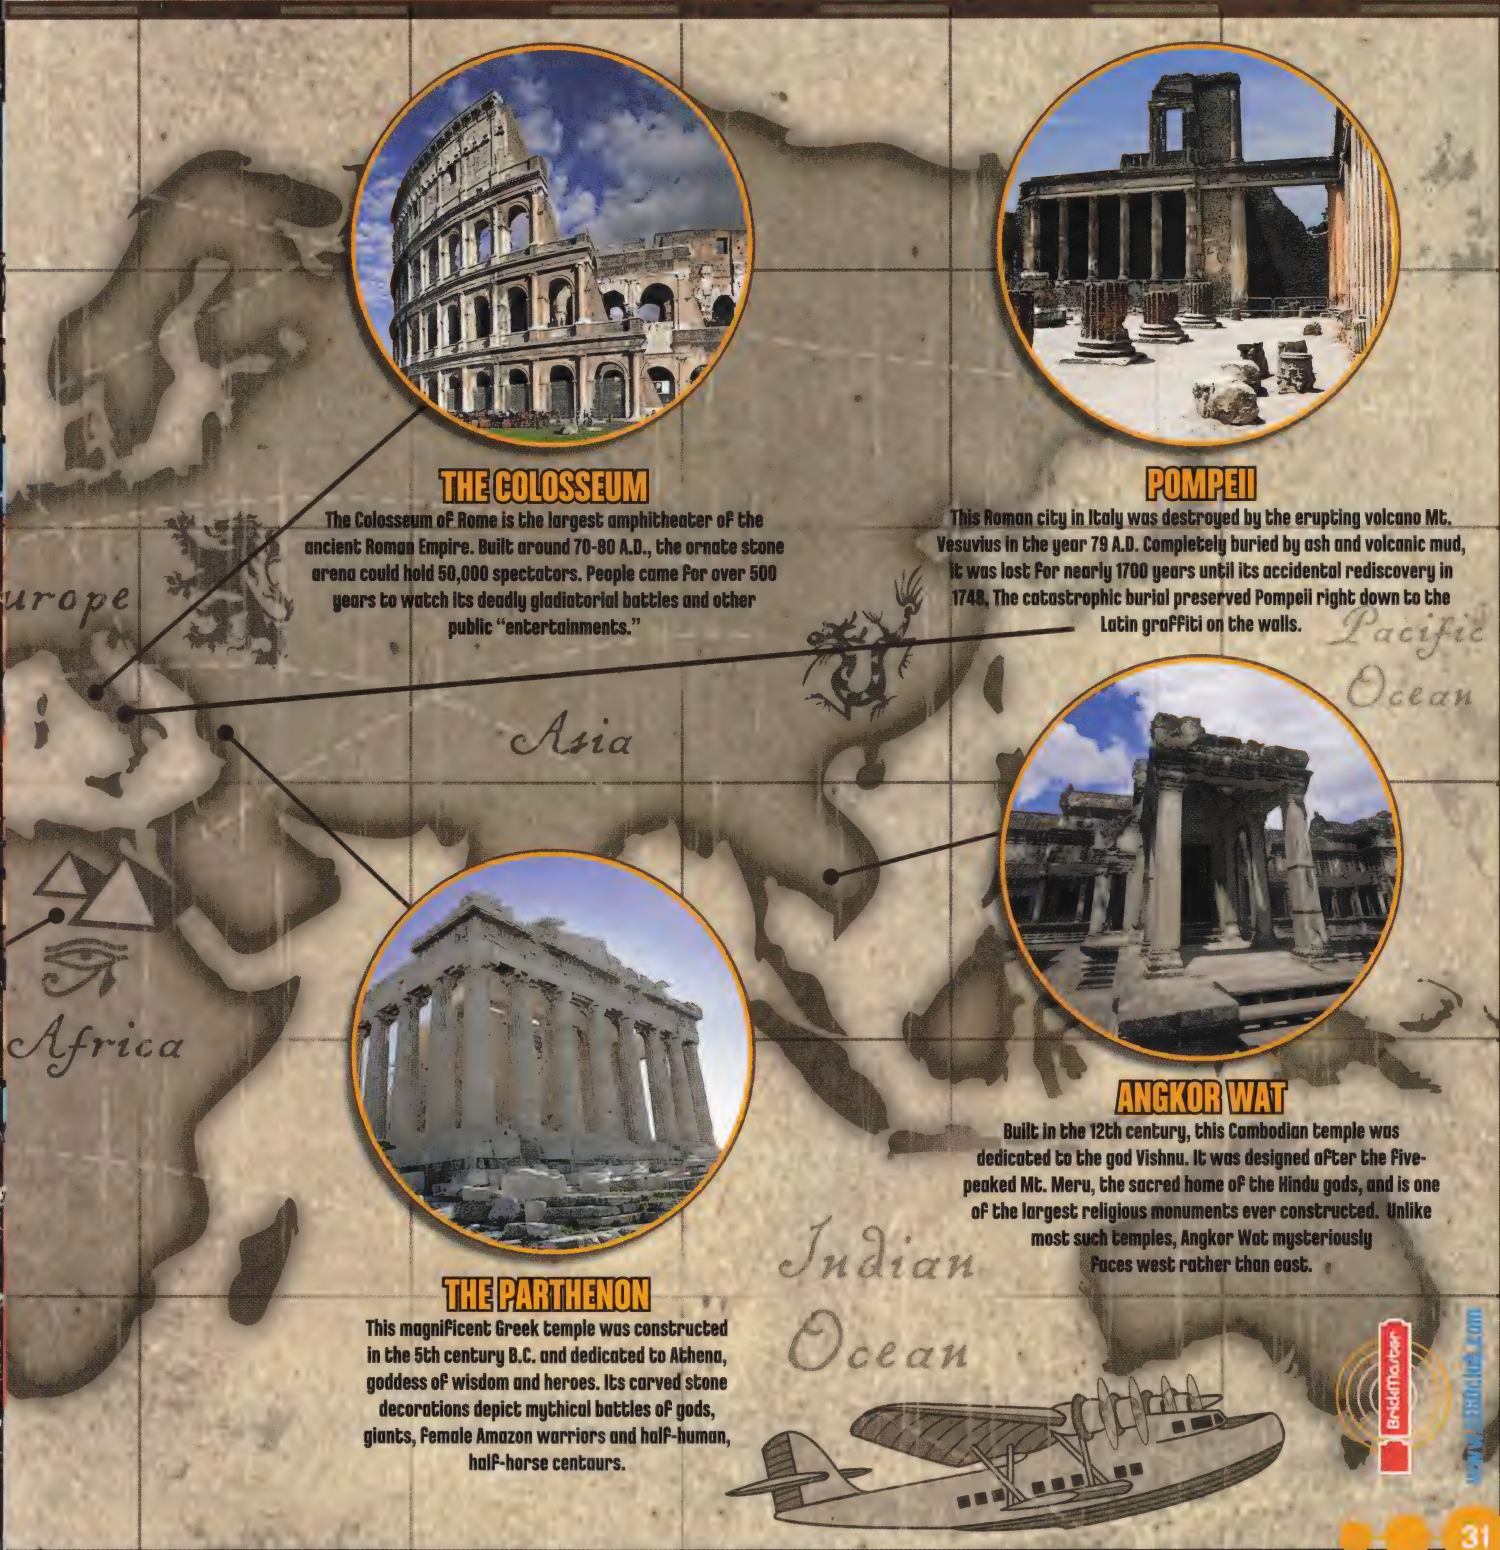

THE PARTHENON

This magnificent Greek temple was constructed in the 5th century B.C. and dedicated to Athena, goddess of wisdom and heroes. Its carved stone decorations depict mythical battles of gods, giants, female Amazon warriors and half-human, half-horse centaurs.

ANGKOR WAT

Built in the 12th century, this Cambodian temple was dedicated to the god Vishnu. It was designed after the five-peaked Mt. Meru, the sacred home of the Hindu gods, and is one of the largest religious monuments ever constructed. Unlike most such temples, Angkor Wat mysteriously faces west rather than east.
